Disease Carriers.

After recovering from the active symptoms of an infectious disease, the convalescent has the germs in his system for a longer or shorter period of time, varying from a few days to a few weeks. In a small percentage of convalescents the germs remain in the system over long periods—from a few months to a number of years. In infantile paralysis the germs are found in the secretions of the mouth and nose. Those coming in contact with these secretions may receive infection. In scarlet fever the secretions of the mouth and nose may be infected for two months after recovery from the disease. In diphtheria the secretions of the mouth and nose may be infected for an indefinite period of time. In typhoid fever, the gall bladder may become infected and remain so for years. Here gall stones may be the direct result of infection, or the gall bladder may become inflamed and even develop an abscess. People having such germs in this way and carrying infection are called disease carriers.

Such people are perhaps the most important agents in keeping the entire list of infectious diseases alive by being the means of transmitting the disease germs from one person to another. The care and disposition of these people are perhaps the most important in the prevention of diseases.

Post Election Epic.

We're coming, Father Woodrow, a hundred thousand strong; they've kept us out of office for sixteen years too long; we're hungry and we're thirsty, but manna you'll supply; from a messenger to cabinet, the heads will surely fly; we've waited and we've waited to hear the big horn blow; and now we'll feast on plenty while others eat the crow; and now from Maine to Texas, you'll hear the battle cry—we're coming, Father Woodrow, we're coming for our pie.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The next time Guy Sanders is selling a pair of ladies' shoes, he will look around to see if the lady is looking at a piece of chinaware before he says anything about the fit.

There is something wrong about the way the assessed valuation of real and personal property is made. There don't seem to be any uniform system, or there are too much political favors shown. Again, it may be a lack of incompetency or pure laziness and cussedness. The county assessor should acquaint himself with the actual market value of every piece of real and personal property in the county. Then show no favors, treat everybody alike, and contend for the respect of his judgment before the Board of Equalization. We know of real property if sold at a top market price would not exceed $250, assessed at $500; also, property worth $1,500, assessed at $500. There is no justice in such assessment, and it is purely and simply a case of a big fish swallowing a little one. The only way to get an accurate assessment and a close collection, is to have township organization.—Malden Merit.

This is to notify you that if your tax and interest due The Little River Drainage District has not been paid, and is not paid on or before December 31st, 1912, suit will be immediately brought against you for the collection of the same. You will then be compelled to pay not only the tax and interest, but cost of suits and attorney's fees as well.

Most of the landowners owning land in the district have paid their tax. Those of you who have not done so will now be required to pay them, together with the interest and penalties thereto attached. Suit will be brought on all delinquents immediately after January 1st, 1913.

CHAS. R. PIERCE,
Collector of Pemiscot County, Mo.
December 4, 1912.

If some of the people who curse and abuse the city collector because he calls upon them for the purpose of collecting the taxes they are due the city, were arrested and made to pay a good, stiff fine, they might be better and wiser men. The same people are very quick to raise a howl when they think the marshal has overlooked something that has to do with others or other matters, but when it comes to them, the shoe is on the other foot. An officer of the law cannot be blamed or censured for doing his duty, and yet City Marshal and Ex-Office Collector Dewey has been cursed and abused and ordered out of peoples' houses more than a dozen times simply because he called upon them in the plain discharge of his official duty to collect taxes. If the city cannot protect an officer in the discharge of his duty then he should protect himself. Such people need a good, strong dose of something that will cause them to remember.

Rans Owens, about 60 years of age and well known to many of our people, was found dead at Pascola Saturday morning. He probably died of heart failure. He was at one time a conductor on the Iron Mountain railroad. He was in Hayti Friday.

Notice to Delinquent Taxpayers Owning Lands Within The Little River Drainage District:

This is to notify you that if your tax and interest due The Little River Drainage District has not been paid, and is not paid on or before December 31st, 1912, suit will be immediately brought against you for the collection of the same.
